

Workshop Invitation

Exploring theoretical and practical approaches on diversity in educational settings of schools and cultural institutions

The workshop is designed for educators/curators in cultural institutions (in particular museums), school teachers and members of immigrant communities that are interested in the topic of diversity in the context of schools and cultural institutions.

This one day workshop is an invitation to...

...discuss and reflect on experiences related to your own work in the context of education and curation with your peers

...explore chances and challenges of diversity in the educational and cultural context

...and get new inspiration on practical hands-on strategies to promote diversity in your respective contexts.

The workshop therefore offers space for joint learning and the exchange of different perspectives. It will be held in English - during exchange and work phases in groups, it is of course possible to switch to your preferred language.

The event is organized in the context of the EU project “Moving Europe. Negotiating Legacies of Migration at the Museum”.

The workshop will be facilitated by the Migration Lab, a network for education and culture in the migrant society, based at the University of Hildesheim (Germany).

Prof. Dr. Viola Georgi holds the chair for Diversity Education at the University of Hildesheim and is the funder of the Migration Lab.

Elias Braun is a research fellow at the Institute for Special Education at the University of Koblenz and is doing his doctorate on subjectivation processes in pedagogical representation practices.

Maria Nesemann is a research fellow at the Institute for Education and the Institute for Cultural Policy at the University of Hildesheim. She is particularly interested in the intersection between culture and the public sphere.
